

Greater St. Louis has a history of building great partnerships:

Lewis & Clark, Ice & Tea, Rhythm & Blues, Ice Cream & Cones, Ike & Tina and Cardinals & Baseball to name a few.

ARCHS continues Greater St. Louis' partnership building tradition.

Area Resources for Community and Human Services (ARCHS) is a private 501c3 nonprofit organization that serves as the official community partnership for the Greater St. Louis Region as designated by the State of Missouri. Missouri's community partnerships help the state make its resources go further by matching them with additional public and private sources - which benefit local residents and communities.

BUILDING PARTNERSHIPS : Our Expertise

ARCHS brings organizations together to maximize their collective expertise - ensuring the whole of Greater St. Louis' community resources are indeed greater than the sum of their individual parts. This includes leveraging funding. ARCHS maximizes funding/resources using a 1 + 1 = 3 (leveraging) model. For example, let's say ARCHS is awarded a $100,000 grant. ARCHS in turn partners with other organization(s) to add an additional $200,000 in either cash or in-kind goods or services - ultimately delivering a partnership valued at more than $300,000. ARCHS does not deliver programs to the general public. Instead, ARCHS works with local organizations to pool their time and talent in a way that benefits the most people.

Our History & Results:

ARCHS and Missouri's Community Partnership Network was created by order of Missouri's Governor and State Legislature in the mid 1990s. ARCHS has a successful history of leveraging more than $150 million in area public and private resources and collaborating with community leaders and organizations. Each year ARCHS' partnerships positively impact the lives of thousands of residents. ARCHS' many community accolades include a What's Right with The Region Award.

Our Lifelong Learning Partnerships:

ARCHS promotes education as the key to personal and professional success. ARCHS builds collaborative public and private community partnerships that foster lifelong-learning experiences that enrich the lives of the region's children and adults.
